

PATIENT STORIES

Do you have a positive story to tell about clinical research?

Delivering research to make
patients, and the NHS, better

THESE PEOPLE DO...

Delivering research to make
patients, and the NHS, better

Dave: Cancer patient

Dave is battling back to health and he's now part of a patient group that offers insight into current trials and how these are beneficial for patients to help others just like him...

“Life feels good now...I'm very passionate about research and I think getting involved where you can is really important...”

Lucy: Parkinson patient

Lucy's health has drastically improved and she now volunteers for Parkinson's UK and is involved in village life, from being co-chairwoman of the village hall management committee, to helping run the monthly market...

““You have to keep positive and keep going. Keeping moving, that is half the battle.”

- Have you recently taken part in clinical research?
- Or do you care for someone that has?
- Did you get something positive out of the experience?
- Has your health improved?
- Have you learnt more about your condition?
- Have you enjoyed the opportunity to contribute to future patient care?
- Would you like to tell other people about it?

....If yes, then we need your enthusiasm,
your experience and your story to help us to promote research!

Find out more about Patient stories: www.crn.nihr.ac.uk/patientstories

